HISTORY OF BANKING

India

In ancient times there are evidence of banks from the Vedic period (beginning 1500 BC). Later during the Maurya dynasty (321 to 185 BC), an instrument called adasha was in use, which was a bill on a banker drawn by him to a third person, which corresponds to the notation of a bill of exchange as it must stand today. During the Buddhist period, there was considerable use of these instruments. Merchants in large towns gave their credit to one another.

15th - 17th CENTURIES - EXPANSION

ITALY

Between 1527 and 1572 a number of important banking family groups such as the Medici, Spina and Pallavicino families, who were connected with art and wealth, the Doria, although not so influential, and the Peruzzi and the Lomellini.
